What it does:

Provides supply-chain-management services, primarily in the defense market.

Why it's growing:

Proprietary technology called SEDNA, which allows customers, suppliers, and program managers to collaborate in real-time. Has also benefited from increased military spending.

What's noteworthy:

The company recently partnered with both the New Jersey Department of Labor and the VA Hospital to provide jobs to military veterans. The company also has a "Hire Veterans First" initiative for many job openings.
